A CORRESPONDENT OF ORE OF DEE Northern contemporaries repently wrote a bitter complaint against the unprincipled fabrications of the lying amards so to the disturbances in Northern China which have appeared in the form of telegraphic news in the home papers. The complaint is undoubtedly well-founded. Telegrams of the most alarming nature apprared in newspapers of high-standing, mesupapers which not without reason; are predited with aparing no trouble or axpense to insure the absolute security of the intelligence which they convey to their readers. It was only natural that there telegrams should be accepted by the public as substantially true. To a great extent the scouracy of what is published as news can be insured; but even the most influential journals, as regards telegrams concerning what transpires co far distant as the North of China, must be entirely at the mercy of their correspondents; and it is unfortunate that the grape. of the country-people in China was accepted as gospel and made the bests of these rumours. The report of a general rising and massacre of Christians and Knyopeans in Manchuria was a fair sample of what the correspondent in For Uniter on to when he permits his desire for the production of sometimes popy to outrum both his discretion and his sease of responsibility. It is no wonder that anxious telegrams from friends at home Dec. 1 | Ainsdale, Morry, 18 | Electra, were resolved by Europeans resident in that part of the Chinese empire where the gaperal rising and measure of Christians. and Europeans? was alleged to have taken place. THE FALSETTO VOICE. -Mr E. Davidson Palmer, Mus. Bac. Ozon., calls the attention of scientific men to an apparently unknown fact in connection with voice production. The fact has to do with the co-called falsetto voice. The general opinion about this kind of voice is that it is something altogether unnatural, and that it ought never to be used. According to modern scientific theories, however, It is one of two or more registers, and is the drainage of 653 buildings had been supposed to be intended by nature to be completed, leaving 198 in hand. THE TEMPER OF ANIMALS.

Animal temper, says a writer in the Spectator, is naturally pacific, and mild. Bad temper is the privilege of more highly organised hatures; and the mild resentment of the plamble tiger finds its development in the apoplactic, fury of the mandril and the measured malice of mankind Horaco's suggestion, that Promethous added to the ill-temper of man the strength of a mad lion, must be taken literally. The general law of good-nature in the animal world makes the exceptions all the more remarkable. Quarrelsome species appear among a friendly tribe, just as an ill-tempered individual does in a kindly species. The ruminants are a most pesceful race. yet deer are savage, and so is that handsome Indian intelope the nyighau. tume stag is a very dangerous pet, and even the beautiful roobuck has been known to kill a boy in a wild fit of rage. But the fiercest and most vindictive of all with the exception of the Cape buffalo, is the South African unu, which never loses its ill-temper when tamed, and always remains among the few dangerous animals which the keepers at the Zoo have to deal with. Hardly less ill-tempered are the zebras and the wild asses, which mygests that human mismanagement is not entirely to blame for the occasional ill-temper and obstinacy of mules and donkeys. To the ill-tempered species we may add the camel and the two-horned black rhingceros. The last is really forocious, charging down on any creature, man or beast, without provocation, and capable of inflicting mortal wounds even on the lion, the elephant, or difficult to find more than a dozen species fluence, what I could never have donewe include all these carnivorous animals which exhibit a certain ferocity in the capture of their prey. But it will be found that, apart from this law of their being, such animals are not, as a rule, either ill-tempered or malicious. On the contrary, their natural bias is towards good-nature, and it may be inforred that the fierceness exhibited by to try to produce it in print, for some them when actually striking their proy, years at least. is rather a gradual development from a particular necessity than an es-

This age does seem to have exhausted invention nearly; still it his one important contract on its hands yet ... the invention of the phresophone; that is to my, a method whereby the communicating of mind with mind may be brought under command and reduced to certainty and system. The telegraph and the telephone are going to become too slow and wordy for our needs. We must have the thought itself shot into our minds from a distance; then, if we need to put it into words, we can do that tedious work at our leisure. Doubtless the something which conveys our thoughts through the air from brain to brain is a finer and subtler form of electricity, and all we need do is to find out how to capture it and how to force it to do its work, as we have had o do in the case of the el ctric currents. Before the day of telegraphs neither of these marvels would have seemed any canor to achieve than the other.

BE mino, Amanda, and I'll treat you like an angel. I daresay! Nothing to est and still less to wear!
